

UPDATED BIOGRAPHY OF JILL P. GANN, Ph.D.

Since the publication of the Vocational Implications of Personality, Jill has continued to keep busy and productive. Some of that “keeping busy” includes her continued writing and publishing in the areas of business, history, psychology, and interestingly enough, historical romance novels (not written under her own name of course to protect her academic integrity!).

Additionally, when the time would allow, she supported several universities with her tuition payments. Some of her financial assistance to higher education went to Central Michigan University, where she obtained a Master’s Degree in Business (Human Resources Management/Organizational Development) and to the University of California where she completed her Doctorate in Counseling Psychology. Jill shares this information by serving as an adjunct professor at Anne Arundel Community College in the divisions of American Studies, Business, and Continuing Education.

Interested in the connection between the mind/body, and complementary medicine, Dr. Gann studied aromatherapy in England and Traditional Chinese Medicine in China. Her expertise was shared with the community when she helped found the first community health and wellness program at the Anne Arundel Medical Center and at the Columbia/Patuxent Medical Center where she continues to lecture on a part-time basis.

Jill is looking forward to retirement from the Anne Arundel County Public School System where she has been employed as a librarian, guidance counselor, Vocational Education Specialist, and Pupil Personnel Worker. At that time she plans to start writing, painting, and traveling.
